Every fall, adult coho salmon lay their eggs in the cool streams that flow through the coast redwood forest. When the baby salmon hatch in the spring, they gradually make their way to the sea. A few years later, they return to the same stream to lay their eggs, just like their parents did!

Illustration from Grandma Ba's Redwood Colouring Book. Grandma Ba is the mother of Ruskin Hartley, the League's Executive Director. She created the colouring book to help her young grandchildren learn about the redwood forest. She lives near Sedbergh, England.
